INFO: Prior to forming the Austerity Program, two isolates in the mid-90's picked up a record that would fuck them up but good.

“ ... That said the two of us – Thad Calabrese and Justin Foley - knew things were different when we brought back a copy of Bolt Thrower's “The IVth Crusade”. Having grown up in mid-America, we were smart enough to avoid what we'd encountered of metal in high school. We'd instead filled up our record shelves with nearly anything put out by Dischord, Touch and Go and AmRep. But Bolt Thrower wasn't hair spray or squealy guitar solos. As the relentless double bass drum rained down from the turntable, we knew what we had to do. It didn't really matter that no one would ever hear it. We needed more music like this but didn't know where to find it. So we decided we were the ones to make it. And so we did.”

Twenty years later they re-recorded the songs they'd written; here's ten of them.
